

Kevin “Mc” McIlvoy (1953-2022)

The MFA Program for Writers is mourning the September 30 death of veteran faculty member, Kevin McIlvoy. Mc was 69. He joined the Program’s fiction faculty in 1990 and taught steadily with us until 2019. He supervised more than 140 students during his 39 semesters of teaching. He also served as our Interim Director from 2008-09 and was a member of the MFA Academic Board for many years.

A longtime faculty member at New Mexico State University and editor of Puerto del Sol for 27 years, Mc was the author of 6 novels, a short story collection, and collection of stories and prose poems. His most recent book, the novel One Kind Favor, was published by WTAW Press in 2021.

Remembrances from faculty and former students will be posted at a later date.

Thoreau was good at losing jobs, answering questions about his work by saying, “The fact is, I am a mystic, a transcendentalist and a natural philosopher to boot”—it is a good answer for writers to offer the gainfully employed who inquired about our many and underpaid day jobs.

From Mc’s lecture, “Desinence,” 2015

Thoreau was good at losing jobs, answering questions about his work by saying, “The fact is, I am a mystic, a transcendentalist and a natural philosopher to boot”—it is a good answer for writers to offer the gainfully employed who inquire about our many and underpaid day jobs.

from “Desinence,” Mc Ilvoy, 2015